FRANCE REPORTED TO HAVE AGREED TO A MORATORIUM

Proviso Made for Certain Economic Guarantees-French Interests Must Be Recognized

LONDON, Dec. 9 (By The Associated Press)-Raymond Poincaré, toward the close of the first session of the conference of allied premiers here today, is understood to have said that France would consent to a moratorium of two years for Germany if certain economic guarantees accom-

These guarantees, briefly, were the economic control of the Rhineland and partial occupation of the Ruhr district with one division of troops to collect the customs of the coal output.

M. Poincaré pointed out that these guarantees were in no way to be regarded as military action against Ger many, but temporary economic measures to insure carrying out the necessary financial reforms during the life of the moratorium.

The conference of allied premiers held a two-hour session this afternoon, adjourning for luncheon shortly before 2 o'clock. The heads of all four delegations-British, French, Italian and Belgian-addressed the Practice of Stock Dividend Distribution Defended as Business Necessity

In an interview given by Henry Ford to a representative of The Christian Science Monitor in his private car Fairlane last evening, Mr. Ford related his theory of compensation for service rendered, discussed stock dividends and corporation surplus, touched on gasoline and anthracite prices, and took a fling at the Electoral College system.

"I think that the present wave of stock dividends is a sort of instinctive STRAITS PROBLEM what he thought the reason was for the prevalence of this method of disprocess," said Mr. Ford when asked tributing surpluses. Let the pressure be on him until he wakes up to the fact that he can remedy it. The only way to get the public to act is to touch it in a sensitive spot—and that is its pocketbook.

I don't think that these stock dividend declarations are a form of avoiding legitimate taxation. The stock they give is only paper, but it gives the stockholder a somewhat better claim for his share of the earnings. It doesn't seem reasonable to tax the surplus, does it, when this surplus comes from earnings, and earnings have already been taxed?

TWO COAL FACTORS PRODUCE VIOLENCE IN WEST VIRGINIA

Industry Over-Manned by Army of 200,000—Operators Look on Union as Conspiracy

The following article is the twentysecond of a series revealing conditions in the coal industry in the United States. The pressing importance of the situation is illustrated by the appointment by President Harding of the Fact-Finding Commission now functioning. A special investigator for The Christian Science Monitor has collected the facts presented.

Special from Monitor Bureau WASHINGTON, Dec. 9-Economic laws have been too much for West Virginia-they have turned this State into a battleground. The struggle goes on silently, inevitably, and unceasingly. No one can predict the outcome. In the soft coal counties of the State the irresistible force is meeting the immovable obstacle. The result has been riot and violence in the past it may be riot and violence in the

A member of the President's Fact-Finding Commission has just told the writer that he (the writer) has been deceiving the public. The correspond ent has said that there are 150,000 surplus men in the bituminous in-dustry who remain idle all year through. This is incorrect. There is an army of at least 200,000 men and very likely more whose services could be dispensed with.

According to the commissioner if all the present soft coal mines of the Nation produced for only five days a week they would have an output of coal twice what the country could use in normal times. This is the use in normal times. This is the economic fact that has turned West Virginia in the past into a field for struggle. The other fact is the United Workers. The richest fields of that State are non-union.

When the United Mine Workers fix standard wages, according to the commissioner, they set a certain minimum which men must earn by the week or a wet plank in the party platform Dry Sentiment Demonstrated Just how far the liquor forces can recover the ground lost during the last 24 hours remains to be seen but their complete rout in the House drove home the fact that public sentiment, which President Harding declared must dictate any modification of the Volstead Law, is decidedly against them. Seven votes was the total strength which the cause of modification could muster in the face of the irresistible counter-attack precipitated by the President's plea for stricter law enforcement.

The situation is unique today inas-much as it finds the wet ranks virtully floundering without a leader capable to control his own followers, while out of the struggle there has arisen a new dry leader in Louis C. Cramton (R.), Representative from Michigan, member of the Appropriations Committee, to whom the prohibition forces are beginning to look as a successor to Andrew J. Volstead, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, whose term ends

March 4. Aided by Mr. Cramton's straight-forward leadership and steeled by the personal support of President Harding, the dry forces successfully bowled over, one after another, the series of amendments offered by John Philip Hill (R.), Representative from Mary-land, intended to tie up the $9,000,000 appropriation for law enforcement during the next fiscal year. On the first vote, the heralded wet attack was

As to Gasoline Price

Here Mr. Ford was asked whether the large stock dividends of the Standard Oil companies did not have in 1915 around 12 cents, was now 25 cents. Mr. Ford answered this indirectly by saying: "This amendment," he declared "is in keeping with the attitude and general demeanor of those who are attempting to defeat the enforcement of national prohibition and hope to bring more service stations all the time. This about the repeal of the national pro-hibition law. "But there is nothing to be sur-prised in that because yesterday he station will pay since people go about at will.

If people could get gasoline a lot cheaper than it is now, they wouldn't be any better off. Such a big percentage of them would waste it. In one way, then, higher prices make for econ omy of natural resources.

Referring again to surplus, he said: here again the French are skeptical. "The percentage of a company's annual They do not believe that it is possible. earnings that should go into surplus product and condition of the industry." He continued:

If the demand is great, I think there is no limit to the earnings which a company can or should make, because there is no limit to the extensions and expansions that a company makes to keep up with demand. Limiting Business a Mistake

As for this business of eternally ham-pering and limiting the follow who can go ahead and do things and-as seems to be going on now—the looking upon a surplus as a likely target for more revenue—well, there is generally some nincompoop who doesn't know how to make money, that is always trying to a dog barking at an elephant.

Answering a question as to whether he believed that there is a limit to what a man is worth, in money terms, to society, Mr. Ford intimated he didn't think so, saving:

How are you going to change a system, where society will pay a man for his ideas, inventions or product? I don't know of any way that is better. As for giving huge sums of money to private charities as a sort of offset to big earning power, I don't thing much of it. The State should take charge of charity.

As for limiting the size of corpora tions. I don't believe that it would be of any good. We are going to see corporations the size of which will make the present ones look like pigmies. It doesn't make any difference how big they are, as long as they are of service

Mr. Ford said that the reason for his present visit to New England was to look over the ground some more. "We Brussels Conference taking place durhave not decided on a site for our new plant, as yet, but we are going to have a deep-water site before long," he said, adding

We are expanding steadily. We have a $30,000,000 program of improvements to be completed within a year. We won't declare any stock dividend, only the regular cash dividends, and we will spend them in the same way that we have in the past; that is, in extensions and improvements. and improvements

FRANCE REPORTED TO HAVE AGREED TO A MORATORIUM

(Continued from Page 1) failure? Opinion in this direction has gasoline which sold in New England grown considerably. It is argued that the British generally confound two separate issues. There is an immediate question and a more remote question. All that can be discussed in London is whether a moratorium should be granted, and on what conditions. The rest, that is to say, the problem of reparations as a whole gether with the question of inter-allied debts should be examined at Brussels later. It is urged that while America is not prepared to come to an agreement with England respecting debts, England is not likely to forgive the French debt. On this point the French are pessimistic and practically rule it out of the London conference. Another important point is that of the international loan to Germany, and taking into consideration the present depends entirely on the company, the state of Germany and the world money market, that any substantial sum can be raised. Indeed, even the Belgian bonds, which are fully guaranteed and was entertained about their negotiability. But in the uncertainty of the handle this paper. The French contend, therefore, that a big loan is out of the question.

Undoubtedly this is so until con fidence in Germany is restored, but this is, or should be, precisely the object of the Brussels Conference. If the German debt is finally fixed, if a moratorium is granted, if the German budget is balanced and German financial reforms effected, then a huge credit operation will be possible But the French are looking at the immediate question. For the granting of any moratorium they demand pledges. These pledges seem to imply some form of extended occupa Obviously this is not calculated to restore German credits, so that the problem may be made worse. Although there is no imminent date fixed of the Ruhr occupation, such prospect should now be faced.

It probably would not be a complete occupation, but merely such an operation as would insure the control of a customs' cordon placed round Ruhr by which the economic life of Germany could be regulated. there is a distinct possibility sometime in the new year. The French have not been paid by Germany; their patience is at end and the means o pressure which has been discussed for years may eventually be applied. This possibility gives the London conversation a particularly momentous character.

Italy appears to be largely on the side of France, now the former is under a new Government, but the Britis! view remains opposed to a policy which may prove destructive, though it is inclined to yield on the question ing the next wto months.

ZINC MARKET

Current zinc price is 7.36 cents a pound, East St. Louis, or prompt zinc smelted west of the Mississippi. January zinc is selling at 7.25 to 7.30, and February-March shipments at 7.15 to 7.20. The demand is almost entirely from export buyers. Consequently there are practically no quotations for zinc of prime western strade originating at smelters east of the Mississippi.

been sent to far-off points from the non-union mines during the soft-coal

In West Virginia the operators assert that their independence safeguards the Nation. The non-union miners are satisfied in some of the counties with the regular work they get, even if their wages are below the union scale. It is better, they argue, to receive six days' work at $6 a day than three days' work at $10 a day. On the other hand, it appears that some of the miners of State chafe under the restrictions and would be glad to unionize.

Outside of the non-union fields neither the operators nor the miners are happy. The operators see their orders vanish in slack seasons when they are underbid by the cut-wage West Virginia operators, and the union miners see their wages vanish through the competition of their unorganized fellows. Consequently the fortress of West Virginia is assaulted by organized Labor, and there is intrigue against it on the part of some operators. Though, in fact, the issues are by no means as clean cut as this might indicate, these are the forces which exist and are driving on the struggle.

Union Termed "Conspiracy"

On the one side is the determined operator. Giving testimony before the Senate Committee investigating the Mingo disturbances of 1921, one such employer explained why he claimed the right for deputy sheriffs assurance that the Administration re-

That was the answer zation which the Supreme Court if it to those who urge this or that curehad to decide the issue on a legal all for the railroads, especially those basis alone would declare a "criminal who want government operation, on conspiracy" since its constitution included a clause asserting that they were entitled "to the full social value of their labor." which he interpreted as meaning that "the man who employs us will receive no compensation or the money he has invested."

For these reasons, the operator told William S. Kenyon, the chairman of the committee, non-union operators of Logan County refused to discuss the organization at all. "We decline to leal," he said. "We decline to sit round a table with our feet and their feet under the table to see if we can ome to an arrangement."

Looked On as "Robbers"

"Mr. Chairman," he added, "we just is much decline to talk with them. knowing what they intend, as we would decline to sit down and talk with a robber or any other man who told us that when he got the power he intended to take our property away from us.'

On the other hand in West Virginia are the confident leaders of the union, who have organized mines producing about 70 per cent of the nation's output. Such a one is the President of legislation as President Harding indi-District 17 of the United Mine Work-is believed to be inescapable.

MR. JOHNSON, SHUNNING NEW BLOC MAY BECOME HARDING ADVISER fact, those on the inside of that con-vention are saying quite freely today that during the convention friends of Senator Harding approached Senator Johnson with a proposal that in case the nomination went to California, the man who is now in the White House might have a place at the cabiloof from entangling alliances.

Visitors at the White House during the last few weeks have obtained a distinct impression that President Harding is conscientiously trying to get a different viewpoint on political and economic questions from that which the men who have been his closest advisers in the past on these subjects have been trying to impress upon him. To put the matter plainly, he is looking for some new advice.

Paying Heed to Voice of Voters The very delay in presenting his views to Congress, thus breaking a precedent of nearly 70 years, was in a large measure due to the fact that he has sensed the need of getting the opinion of men who have been more closely associated with the sentiment manifested in the last election. His failure to obtain such advice has already led the President into what his friends say is a lamentable error. It was not to be expected that he would turn to Robert M. LaFollette Republican senator from Wisconsin While the President was speaking and the other members of the progres of the Ashurst resolution to amend the direct election of presidents and the convocation of the new Congress and inauguration of the new President within three months after an election because it came from the progressive bloc, President Harding. has, according to his friends, made a blunder.

That part of the resolution changing the time of the convocation of Con-gress and the inauguration of the President, was proposed by Senator Ashurst more than a year and a half ago. It went to the Judiciary Commit-tee, controlled by Old Guard Republicans, and has been resting there ever

Sponsored by His Friends

In the meantime, it has been studied indorsed by that body, and it has been sponsored by some of President Har-ding's best conservative friends, chief among whom is George Wharton Pep-per (R.), Senator from Pennsylvania. These friends of the President were chagrined when they learned of the authoritative statements issued from making a campaign on his record and advocacy of progressive political thought and action.

Closer to President

An expectation is growing in the minds of politicians here that within the next few weeks Senator Johnson may loom up as one of the principal advisers of President Harding. Such an expectation does not seem to be at all unreasonable in the light of certain well known facts, although undoubtedly the overtures would have to come from the White House.

The defeat of Senator Johnson by President Harding in the making a campaign on his record and ably opposed to such an amondment.

Recent canvasses of the Senate disclose that this proposal has many friends even among the so-called reactionary Republicans, and it is the opinion of some of the Old Guard leaders who have tested the sentiment that a resolution of similar purport will easily command the necessary two-thirds majority even in the present senate if it is submitted to a vote. In fact it is looked upon as almost inevitable that such an amendment will be submitted to the states before the next general election.

It was of course inevitable.

President Harding in the Chicago soon as it became known that Senator convention of 1920 engendered neither Johnson would not join the progressive bloc, an opinion arcse and gained considerable currency, that he was vention are saying quite freely today his presidential aspirations for 1924. There may be no merit in the idea that either of these men has a "presi-dential bee," for so far as can be learned, no one has had the temerity to put the question directly to them; nevertheless, it is a strong conviction so strongly held by many 8 Representatives, as well, as others, that it is bound to have an effect upon national politics until it is confirmed or exploded.

General Allen! They were put at his disposal by the Rhineland Commis-sion and the French authorities so that he could carry on despite the almost complete withdrawal of his own men. And herein is a simple lesson in occupation.

Troops Are Popular

These French troops, because they are under American control, are not regarded with the same hostility as are their comrades up the river. They are not identified with political motives, annexationist aims or separatist pressure and they get on extraordinarily well with the population, considering that they come in the wake of the departed Americans who were favorites among Rhinelanders.

An American officer said he wished people in America could realize what it meant to the peace of the world and to American prestige to have even these few troops on the Rhine. Their presence in this region of stress did a great deal to preserve harmony. Everybody trusted them and everywanted them to stay.

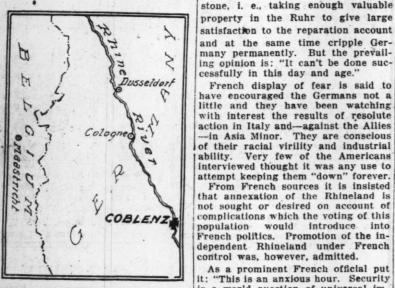

The Germans are anxious to have them because they like them more and fear them less than any of the other armies. While any of them re-main there is some hope that reconciliation rather than vengeance will be the guiding motive in Allied policy.

And the French are said to want the Americans because, though they frequently veto French proposals, which are drastic, nevertheless the Americans are sympathetic toward France in her insistence upon reparations and protection and have been giving support which is valued. America with the Allies on the Rhine suggests America with the Allies in Europe, which is considered worth not a little iar with big business pointed out that sacrifice of annexationist or destruc- Ruhr industries could not be run in sacrifice of annexationist or destruc-

FIGURES ASSERT PROHIBITION VALUE

Boston Police Arrests for Drunkenness Show Tremendous Drop Since Last Saloon Year

While figures given out from Boston police headquarters for arrests for drunkenness during the year ended Nov. 30 show some increase over last year, a fairer perspective of actual conditions is pointed out by comparing the 37,643 arrests in the prohibition year of 1922 to the 63,142 arrests in 1916, which was a year of licensed liquor and the open saloon.

That arrests for drunkenness in Boston by the police are actually 70 per cent less than they were in 1916, careful comparison of the official figures for the two years proves. while as compared with last year. there has been an increase in arrests in Boston for drunkenness amounting to about 21 per cent as a matter of fact conditions in this regard are some 70 per cent better than they were before prohibition went into effect.

As has been pointed out previously in discussions of this subject, arrests for drunkenness are far more thoroughgoing today than they were be-fore the Eighteenth Amendment became the law of the land. Today when a man is drunk it is so noticeable that the policemen make many acrests which in the former order of things would not have been made.

Under prohibition, arrests for many of the crimes attendant upon intoxica-tion such as assault and battery, profanity, and burglary have fallen off noticeably and policemen destrous of making a record for efficiency place in custody many more men who are visibly intoxicated than they formerly did. That this state of affairs actually exists and leads to larger figures for arrests for drunkenness, officials who make a study of present day conditions readily admit.

Comparison of total arrests in the state for the same periods of time are also interesting. In 1922, the number of arrests in the state for the year ending Sept. 30, last, was 73,795, while for the year previous the number was

Officials interested in the enforcement of prohiibtion, as one of the laws of the Republic are really encouraged over the showing made in Boston. While increasing diligence on the part of the police force and a disposition to take the mandate of the Eighteenth Amendment more seriously has resulted in a 20 or 21 per cent increase over the number of arrests last year, the great advance in sobriety as shown by police records as compared with the days of license shows what a change for the better prohibition is certainly producing. The figures today prove what an impressive effect prohibition enforcement is making upon the situation. They prove that in a large city the Eighteenth Amendment can be and is enforced and that the more carefully the official returns are studied the more apparent it is that this fact is true.

Interest in Winter Sports

The interest in winter sports, it is recognized, must first be built up among New Englanders before any great number outside of New England come to appreciate them. To this end the Boston Chamber of Commerce last year organized its first carnival, which filled the hotels of North Conway, N. H., to capacity. This year, from Jan. 18 to 21, the second carnival will be held at Jackson, N. H. The size of the party has been doubled to include 500 persons, and already applications for nearly that number have been received at the offices of the Chamber of Commerce Tourist

Mr. Pinkham explained that one of the framers of the United States Con- drafted by the constitution committee stitution had declared there was no way legally of preventing one State from going to war with another, but that the matter had been left open, with the hope that a feeling of national unity would prevent such a course. He intimated that the same feeling between nations could prevent war in the same way. One member pointed out that free trade among the states was probably as much a cause of peace as any other.

Initial arrangements with an Antwerp linguist to translate and publish various tracts of the association in traces of the association in European languages and distribute them in that continent were authorized by the meeting, and a sum of money was raised for the first venture of this sort. A small leaflet, including statements by Lloyd George, Francesco, Nitti, Woodrow, Wilson, and cesco Nitti, Woodrow Wilson and others, indicating that Germany had not been the sole instigator of war, will be the first to be translated into German and distributed in Germany.

Portions of a letter from David Star Jordan, former president of the University of California, written from Tokyo, were read at the meeting. Proessor Jordan said, in part:

TEXTILE WORKERS TO SEEK INCREASE

Time Nearly Ripe for Demands. Says Official

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 9-That the time is nearly ripe for the presentation of demands to New England textile manufacturers by their employees for the restoration of the wage scale prior to the 221/2 per cent reduction of Dec. 20, 1920, was the opinion expressed last night by international president Thomas F. McMahon, of the United Textile Workers after he had been in conference at Pawtucket, R. I. with Mrs. Sarah Conboy, international secretary of the U. T. W., who arrived in this city yesterday afternoon. On the basis of present wages, this increase would amount to approximately 29 per cent Mr. McMahon said.

The U. T. W. leader said that the Doffers Union of Fall River has already presented its demands for an increase to the manufacturers of that city, and that the executive council of the United Textile Workers will take up the matter at its next meeting in Fall River.

What action the Rhode Island Textile Council will take will probably be decided upon Sunday afternoon at a meeting to be held in Pawtucket, according to Mr. McMahon. The entire matter, he said, rests with the workers themselves, who will be called upon to express their desire or lack of desire to demand an increase through the union ballot box.

Certain factors are cited as contributing to the growth of interest in education and the greater grasping of its opportunities. The vogue of junior high school, supplanting the last three grades of the old "gram-mar school," is found to be encouraging attendance in high school. There has been a tendency, also, to broaden curricula and adjust the educational system more to meet the needs of the student rather than to demand that the student fit the demands of the Parents are more generally convinced that in order that their children succeed they must have the proper training and are more inclined to sacrifice longer that this may be junior high school purposes.

It is the headquarters of the school committee and has been built with the idea of using it as a community cen-ter. It has a domestic service department, a school library, and assembly hall and a gymnasium for small and large functions. The exterior, while following colonial lines, is very modern in architecture. Efforts have been made to keep the lines of colonial appearance, which in so many ways distinguishes this town of old-time signed by Massachusetts educational structures. Even the old bell, which officials as the reason for the increase formerly hung in the belfry of the old of 16.5 per cent in attendance at high school and rang the pupils to their seats for almost a century, has been school attendance figures made in placed in the modern tower and now connection with Education week. PROTESTANTS PLAN DAY-SCHOOL SYSTEM

Mass Meeting Called for 850 New York Pastors to Lay Out Instruction Course

Special from Monitor Bureau

NEW YORK, Dec. 8—To stimulate general interest in the plan of the Protestant Teachers Association to conduct week-day religious study for Children in the Protestant churches of New York City, a meeting, to which 850 pastors of the Greater City are to be invited, will be held in one of the large downtown church edifices on Jan. 29, 1923, at 11 a. m. This meeting will be open to the public.

This action, as reported recently in The Christian Science Monitor, is based on a recommendation of Judge Thomas C. T. Grain of the Court of Special Sessions, made at the regular monthly meeting of the Central Church League of the New York Federation of Churches in the parish house of St. Thomas' Protestant Episcopal Church. The Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires is the rector of this church and chairman of the Central Church League.

Finds Ignorance of Creeds

The Rev. Percy T. Edron, pastor of the Reformed Episcopal Church, expressed hearty approval of the plan to conduct week-day religious study in the Protestant churches for public school children. He said that the urgent need for such work was revealed to him during the World War when he served as an army chaplain. Mr. Edrop was astounded at the ignorance manifested by the Protestant soldiers toward the teachings of their creeds as compared to members of other religious organizations, who showed careful schooling, in their respective lines of faith.

Dr. James Palmer of the Biblical Seminary, presented a report on week-day religious study conducted in the 44 churches of the Central Church League, including the Park Avenue and Madison Avenue Baptist, the Hicksite Friends, Christ Church, Augustus Adolphus and St. Peter's Lutheran churches, and the Central. Adams Memorial, Church of the Covenant, John Hall Memorial and Madison Square Church House of the Presbyterian denomination. The Madison Avenue Baptist Church is reported to have a daily school for religious study with 10 pupils in attendance, the other churches maintaining a weekly school, each attended by from 10 to 800 pupils.

Judge Crain, the principal speaker at the meeting in St. Thomas' Church Parish House, defined religious education as "not so much the communicating of religious knowledge as the development of the spiritual nature so that all impulses to do right may be strengthened, and wrong impulses

The city-wide plan of securing weekday religious instruction, would be to form by appointment from the Protestant denominational bodies a Board of Week-Day Religious' Education, the members to serve without pay. This board would have all powers of supervision and control that the denomination could confer. Such a board should employ a salaried officer to be called the City Superintendent of Religious Schools. The city should be divided into districts with a superintendent of religious education in each.

Full Information Desired

The schools should be in charge of qualified teachers from the Protestant Teachers Association, reinforced by volunteers from the churches or parishes. There should be a uniform curriculum, non-sectarian but containing every proposition found in the creed. The schools would be housed in buildings provided through the voluntary action of the official boards or officers of the various local churches.

of the various local churches.

The schools for religious education should be opened on the first Monday in May. 1923, the intervening time being needed to get ready. On Jan. 2, 1923, representatives appointed by the different Protestant denominational bodies will meet to determine the curriculum, textbooks, and other details.

In presenting the idea of holding a large meeting, to which the 850 Protestant ministers of Greater New York should be invited to attend, Judge Crain recommended that the invitations be sent by registered letter over the signatures of 40 leading pastors.

The Central Church League of the New York Federation of Churches appointed the following committee to deal with Judge Crain's proposals: the Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires, the Rev. Cornelius Woelfikin, the Rev. Ralph W. Sockman, the Rev. Percy Edrop, the Rev. William B. Miller. This committee will draft the letter and obtain the signatures of 40 clergymen to it. It was this committee that recommended to the New York Federation of Churches the holding of the mass meeting.

Favorable Action Taken

The Rev. H. F. La Flamme, staff secretary of the New York Federation of Churches, informs The Christian Science Monitor that the Times Square and Chelsea-Pennsylvania church leagues of the federation, representing about 50 local church bodies, have taken favorable action on the project of week-day religious instruction for public school children. The West Central Park League of the Federation, comprising 38 churches, will also act favorably on the matter.

Mr. La Flamme announces that the general committee is being appointed by the New York Federation of Churches. He also states that there are about 1200 Protestant churches in Greater New York which are expected to back the new program.

Miss Mary Wood Newton, director of the Protestant Teachers' Association which is actively sponsoring the weekday religious work for Protestant public school children, announces a meeting to be held in one of the Fifth Avenue churches on the afternoon of Jan. 14, at which Bishop William T. Manning will deliver an address on the subject of religious education.

GOOD PROGRESS IS BEING MADE

Albert Geiger Jr. Makes Preliminary Report on Preparations for the Olympic Games

NEW YORK, Dec. 9-Satisfactory progress in the preparations for holding the Olympic games at Paris in 1924 is reported in a review received by the American Olympic committee here today. Albert Geiger, Jr., chairman of the Boston A. A., Athletic Committee, who went abroad some weeks ago to investigate conditions from an American team standpoint, said that work on both the stadium and tracks were well advanced.

In his preliminary communication to F. W. Rubien, Secretary of the American Olympic Association, Mr. Geiger stated that the main running track in the Columbes stadium had been completed and promised to be exceptionally fast by the summer of 1924. Another 18 months of rolling and top dressing with later settling and hardening will, in his opinion, provide the fastest track ever prepared for Olympic games competitors and far superior to the track at Antin 1920 which was not finished until after the American team arrived.

No preliminary practice will be permitted upon the Columbes track. A soft dirt track is being constructed inside the Olympic track and all the training work will be confined to this course in order to leave the main track in good shape for the actual competitions.

Reporting on the probable housing situation for the American team Geiger expressed the opinion that the proposed system of small houses to be constructed for the visiting teams would not prove satisfactory from an American point of view. He advised the hiring of a quiet, select, family hotel within 15 or 20 minutes' ride of the Stadium to be given over entirely to the United States competitors. He cited several desirable sites both in Paris and the suburbs, especially Citing French athletic activities and preparations he mentioned that the French figure and speed skaters as hockey players might be expected to make an excellent showing in the ice skating events which will open the eighth Olympic meet at Chamonix, Switzerland, in January, 1924. Swimming is also making rapid progress in France and the new natatorium of the Sporting Club of France is stated to be one of the best in the world, comparing favorably with any in the United States.

No call for candidates for the Aggie about the Vancouver goal but could not score again. Lehman seemed invincible and even stopped a free pen-alty shot by W. Loughlin. Just before the end of the period C. Loughlin got away to a pretty rush and just in front of the Vancouver net passed to Frederickson, who scored.

The second period was much like the first, a record of miraculous saves AMERICAN OWNERS by Lehman. Four times Frederickwhole team and faced Lehman alone, and four times Lehman saved. Then of Vancouver's new players, scored on a pass from Cook after a fine rush. Mackay, who, with Lehman, was playing most of Vancouver's game, got away early in the third period and scored after a rush with Cook. Lehman continued to stop apparently impossible shots, and finally Harris put the visitors ahead with a splendid rush of his own. Finally Meeking tied the score again with a fine shot from left wing, and an overtime period seemed to be inevitable. Then Mackay staged one of his center ice rushes, eluded the defense and passed to Boucher, who scored the winning goal.

MYRICK DECLINES A RENOMINATION

Committee Selects D. F. Davis as Next U. S. L. T. A. President

Special from Monitor Bureau NEW YORK, Dec. 9-When the United States Lawn Tennis Associa-tion holds its annual meeting in this city next February it will be called upon to elect a new president, as J. S. Myrick, who has held that position a number of years, has declined a renomination. The nominating commit-tee has selected D. F. Davis of St. Louis as the man to take up the work which Mr. Myrick is laying down.

In selecting Mr. Davis, the commit-tee, which is made ap of Holcomb Ward, New York; J. E. McLain, Pitts-burgh, and L. H. Waidner of Chicago, selected a man who has not only been a prominent player, but one who has done much toward putting lawn tennis on an international plane enjoyed by few sports. When a student at Har-vard University, Davis, paired with Ward, won the United States doubles championship in 1899 and by defending the title in 1900 and 1901, won permanent possession of one of the doubles trophies. These trophies were in competition longer than any other national tennis trophies yet offered as they were put up in 1885, after R. D. Sears and James Dwight had removed the first ones offered. While he never won the singles championship, he ranked No. 4 in 1898; No. 2 in 1899 and 1900, and No. 3 in 1901.

As the donor of the Davis Cup. which represents the international lawn tennis championship, he became competition in 1900, he took an active part in its defense by winning from E. D. Black and A. W. Gore of the British Isles in the singles, and, with Holcomb Ward, winning from E. D. Black and H. R. Barrett. With Ward, Davis took part in the 1902 matches in doubles, but they were defeated by the famous Doherty Brothers of the British Isles.

It is stated that Mr. Davis has not vet formally accepted the nomination. He is now vice-president of the association and also a member of the executive committee of the American

> Tires cost less now than they ever have, but from the present outlook, prices must increase very noticeably during the coming season. According to experts cotton is going to run short rising in price. This, together with the restricted output as planned by Great Britain, where some of the necessary materials are controlled, must affect American tire manufacturers. There is one good thing about the situation which will, no doubt, work to the advantage of the motorist, and that is the consequent shortening of the market for those tire manufacturers who have reduced quality with prices dur-

BOSTON A. A. MEETS VICTORIA TONIGHT

Followers of amateur hockey in Greater Boston Will have their first teams which are to compete in the United States Amateur Hockey Association championship in action this evening when the Boston Athletic Association and Victoria Hockey Club Research Researc teams meet at the Boston Arena in a practice game.

B. A. A. will have a very different team from last winter, as there is only one former Harvard player in its lineup. W. W. Rice is the former Crimson star, and he will be seen a left wing. There are one or two players new to Boston hockey ers in the Victoria Club, which is a new organization, led by Frank Synnott, Healy and Buntain of this team are from Nova Scotia, while Hall, Collins, and Dougan are from Charlottetown, P. E. I.

Technology met Boston University in the first game played at the Arena last night, and the former won, 7 to 4. For a first game of the season, the Engineers showed good form. It was the first time that Boston University had ever had a varsity hockey team, and the initial showing promises much for the future.

SOUTH MODIFIES MIGRATION RULE

Intercollegiate Conference Holding an Important Meeting at Atlanta

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 9 (Special)-The second annual meeting of the Southern Intercollegiate Conference is being held here. It opened Friday afternoon with much argument on the migratory rule and summer baseball, two of the most important items scheduled to be taken up by the con-

Adjournment for the first day found the summer baseball rule in an unsettled condition. That part of the rule which permitted college players to accept a maximum of $7 a day expense money was abolished and the following rule substituted:

No student shall be eligible to participate in intercollegiate contests if he has played on any baseball team which is a member of an organiz league operating under the national agreement and under supervision of the National Baseball Commission. To the list of professional teams thus prescribed shall be added all the teams in any state which the Conference institutions of such state declare professional and from which they debar their own players.

The session adjourned before Dr. S. V. Sanford, president of the S. I. C., could be called upon to rule upon this action, and the matter will be taken up at today's meeting and fully decided upon. The strict migratory rule as adopted by the Conference last year was modified to a certain extent, but is still strict enough for the purpose of the Conference. After a long argument to repeal the entire rule an amendment was adopted that a student migrating from one college to aonther could not compete in the branch of athletics in which he participated at

Proposed Changes in College Wrestling

Special from Monitor Bureau NEW YORK, Dec. 9—August Peterson, wrestling coach at Columbia University, has recently submitted a list of proposed changes in wreating rules to the Intercollegiale Wrestling Association. A number of Mr. Peterson's proposals have been adopted by the Thomas won 6 to 6, the Cadets completed 23 out of 25 passes, showing how their aerial game was perfected.

William Houle, captain and halfback, when the intercollegiate body meets in States; and it appears probable that when the intercollegiste body meets in New York this month the proposals were two of the best backfield men in will be favorably acted upon. It so, the Conference. Des Moines University, coached by the changes which were inaugurated H. M. Bell, had a surprisingly good in intercollegiate swimming rules last team, which was powerful on defense, and had a driving offense. A tie game with Morningside marred its Confer-week.

The main purpose which the prospective rules are designed to accom-plish is to prevent "stalling" or "holding down." Under the present system bouts become monotonous from the ning. Holding Detroit University to a spectator of the lower season, and a later defeat of Dubuque college of Iowa 13 to 6, were the College of Iowa 13 to 6, were the lower's season. In only one case would he have to take cognizance of seconds as applied to holds, and that is when it becomes apparent that one of the contestants is deliberately holding his opponent to the mat. On such occasions the referee would signal the timekeeper, and at the ex-piration of two minutes the wrestlers would be required to start over again rom a standing position.

It is proposed that bouts in dual competitions should be of 10 minutes' duration, unless a fall is secured; while in the intercollegiates 15-minute periods should be allowed.

Peterson's suggestions provide for two judges, as in boxing competition, selected from the audience, agreed upon by the managers of the teams. The judges would be required to write the name of their choice on a slip of paper and submit it to the announcers. If there should be a dis-

"The Tzar's Bride"

Rimsky-Korsakoff's "The Tzar's Bride" was presented last night at the Boston Opera House by the Russian Grand Opera Company. The opera was played for the first time in Boston. Its first production was in 1899 at the Moscow Private Theater and it was again played at the Maryinsky Theater, where a larger public confirmed the success already accorded the work. In novelty of plot and treatment it is far inferior to the same composer's "Snow Maiden." The subject of the opera has to do with a custom relating to the selection of an imperial bride during the reign of Ivan the Terrible.

Stephen P. Mather, director of the National Park Service in sending the report to Albert B. Fall, Secretary of the Interior, reviewed the history of America's parks and their increasing nopularity as evidenced during the last year, which marked the fiftieth anniversary of Yellowstone.

During the year 1,250,000 persons visited the parks, an increase of an increase of approximately 882,000 over the visitors in 1915.

Taking up in detail the several parks, the report in part says:

Yellowstone Park is reported as having had its most successful season. Of the 51,506 motorists coming in their own cars, 50,000 camped out in the free public camp grounds with their own equipment. The park trail system was before. Yellowstone Park probably offers the best trout fishing in the

The Trapping of Animals

Monitor:

I am heartily in accord with the views expressed in a recent letter in this column regarding cruelty to butterflies, and want to say a word about what I consider the greatest cruelty that exists in the world today—the trapping of animals for their skins.

I am sure that milady in her furs does not realize the cruelty and forture she is encouraging, and I am also sure that if it were up to her to do this killing, even in a merciful manner, she would not have the heart to de it. However, I do not believe it is generally known what anguish this cruel practice causes.

As a matter of fact a trapper often has so many traps out that he is unable to make the rounds oftener than once a week. Therefore these animals must spend days, and nights in the keenest anguish until the trapper gets around to club them to death, unless they have starved or frozen to death in the meantime, or have been eaten by other animals, or have released them-selves by amputating a broken leg by their own teeth.

"The show is giving us an opportunity to get corn growers together to talk over markets and general problems of national and international character affecting this crop," said Prof. R. A. Moore of the University of Wisconsin. "As it returns more dollars than the other four major crops combined, it is quite important that this be studied further. RETAIL BUYING IN LARGE VOLUME FOR CHRISTMAS

"The first real winter storm, with resulting cold or snow in northern areas and rains farther south, plus an increase in holiday buying, has served to accentuate previous contrasts between retail and jobbing trade, on the one hand, and purely wholesale distribution on the other. Retail having is the best since lost Retail buying is the best since last winter, heavy wearing apparel, foot-wear and holiday specialties predom-inating," says Bradstreet's weekly review of domestic business conditions, which continues:

"In this latter direction, active advertising, which is apparently under a full head of steam, is reported bringing a good volume of business to department stores and large retailers. It is significant, however, that complaint from small retailers and neighborhood stores was quite notable at some centers before the apparent breakup of the fine fall weather oc-curred. Business in imported hides is quiet, tanners following the slight weakness in the River Plate and Chicago markets with interest.

Sole Leather Quiet

The trade in sole leather is rather quieter and business is only doing in small parcels. The pressure on the part of the shoe retailer for lower prices is so great that manufacturers are obliged to buy cheap sole bends, and these are being turned out in thousands. Some sensation was recently caused in London by the rumor that about 400 to 500 tons of sole leather had been sold on Russian account, with a further order of another 500 tons to follow. STOCKS YIELD TO PRESSURE AFTER A RISE

Many Early Advances Wiped Out on Profit Taking Today

Some good gains were made by industrial shares, particularly equipments, metals and low priced oils, in the early part of today's New York stock market session, but in a number of cases these were materially reduced or wiped out on resumption of selling pressure and profit taking at the close. Railroad shares were again sluggish, public buying of these issues heing almost negligible. Stocks subject to the special influences, such as A National Lead, which was pushed up 4 points on stock dividend expectations, and Allied Chemical, which ad- A vanced more than 2 points on reports A of heavily increased earnings in November, were the most active.

There was a broadening demand for A

NEW YORK, Dec. 9-The monthly statement issued at noon today by the United States Steel Corporation shows unfilled orders on its books as of Nov. 30, last, of 6,840,242 tons. This compares with 6,902,287 tons on Oct. 31, last, a decrease of 62,045 tons and with 4,250,542 tons on Nov.

RAILWAY BODY ELECTS

CHICAGO, Dec. 9-Hale Holden, president of the Burlington road, was elected chairman of the executive committee of the Association of Railway Executives, to take the place left vacant by T. de Witt Cuyler. Alfred P. Thom will have the direction of the washington office under the direction of the executive committee, the New York office being abolished.

NEW YORK CURB

NEW YORK, Dec. 9—The most important trading on the curb exchange during the past week continued in the Standard Oil issues, including the $100 par value stocks, and the new $25 par value shares, now being traded in on when issued contracts. The market for these stocks has become broader and there were many indications that operations, including apparent distribution of both the old and new stocks, must result in the creation of an extensive permanent market for these issues.

Simms Petroleum, which has taken a new position as a producer, moved up from 12 to 14%, and Mammoth Oil rose from 41% to above 44. Cities Service, after advancing to 199, yielded to 191, dollowing announcement of an intended increase in capitalization.

Industrial issues were irregular. Durant Motors, after selling at 61%, advanced to above 64, making a new high record, and the Indiana shares moved up from 14 to 15%, also making a new high record. Goodyear Tire issues were unusually active, the preferred stock advancing six points to 32. Stutz Motors was heavy, selling down to 15, a new low for recent trading, but later rallied to 17. May Department Stores from 63% to the new high record of 67%, Gillette Safety Razor also made a new high, advancing from 248 to 256. Yale and Towne, when issued, ranged from 49% to 51.

STOCKS MOVE CONTRARY TO PREDICTIONS

Week's Financial Developments Are Regarded as Generally Favorable

NEW YORK, Dec. 9 (Special)-One of the most difficult tasks of a stock broker is to give satisfactory replies to the average run of his customers as to why the stock market goes up or down when there are no apparent developments of sufficient importance often he is in much the same position as the parent of a small boy, besought with all sorts of questrons as to the why and wherefore of many things supposedly well beyond his years. The parent simply does not know, neither does the broker.

Just when a continuance of the downward movement in stocks, or at least a "dragging market," for the least a "dragging market," for the rest of the month was being predicted, 52½ 52½ 1334 1334 to cause good-sized price changes.

least a "dragging market," for the rest of the month was being predicted, stocks began to rally Wednesday afternoon under the leadership of Studebaker and Baldwin Locomotive. There were a few shrewd observers who discerned the turn and were able to buy just in time to be in a position to obtain profits of several points. Even those who were thus fortunate, and told their friends about it, were not recommending the purchase of stocks after the recovery had gone further the next forenoon. In other stocks after the recovery had gone further the next forenoon. In other words, they claimed that to "short covering" hould be attributed the upturn more than to any happening in this country or in Europe.

Mellon's Report Pleases

Mellon's Report Pleases

Why, then, look for reasons outside of the market? The fact is that the announcements were rather conflicting as market factors. Secretary of the Treasury Mellon is regarded as an unusually able man in financial matters. Special attention was given to his annual report. He gave both sides of the economic and financial situations in this country as he saw them tions in this country as he saw them when he wrote his report. The favorable features appeared to be greater in number and more important than the "few weak spots" to which he

Wall Street liked what Mr. Mellon said about not recommending additional taxes and also about the wisdom of reducing the sur-tax and readjusting still further other features and tax law.

Neither the Secretary of the Treasury in his report, nor President Harding in his message to Congress relative to the annual budget held out-much hope for big reductions in Government expenditures soon, chiefly because such a large proportion of them are of a fixed character. Encouraging Outlook

Mr. Mellon, in offering a few days later, three series of short term securities, presented a more encouraging picture of the present status of the Government's finances and the outlook for next year than he did in his annual report. In fact, he held out the hope that the deficit of $697,000,-000 at the beginning of the present fiscal period would be wiped out by the end of this month. Already it has been reduced to $274,000,000. He called attention also to the indicated surplus of $180.000,000 for 1924, for which period the budget showed a decrease of $500,000,000 in the estimated expenditures.

The strength of sterling exchange could not fail to attract attention out-side of international banking circles. When it continued to advance day after day naturally it was assumed that something of special importance had occurred in European affairs of try was lacking. At first most of the buying of sterling and French exchange was attributed to a powerful financial institution in this city, whose chief executive recently returned from Europe more optimistic about conditions and the outlook than most important observers who have come

The situation at the Lausanne Conference was not encouraging on the whole all week. To the contrary, most of the time extreme tenseness existed between the English and Russian representatives. The cable advices that the Allies were standing together in their reply to the demands of Georgi Tchitcherin of Russia did not cause surprise here. They knew that they must, as they always have done when the real' test is reached. German Internal Loan

The conference of premiers in London today preparatory to the Brussels Conference, set for Dec. 15, has attracted much attention on this side. Dispatches from London have indicated a lack of enthusiasm as to the outcome. The proposal of the German Government to float an internal loan to help stabilize its currency and pay reparations naturally met with approval in this country, as in Europe. The firmness in call money rates at this center until yesterday and the absence of a keen buying demand for bonds caused considerable comment. The loss in gold by the New York Federal Reserve Bank would seem to ber institutions may not be as easy as supposed. Rumors of a further reduction in the Great Northern Railway dividend caused a sharp reaction in that issue. Action is scheduled to be taken on Dec. 18 and payment made on Feb. 1. According to the best information obtainable the distribution will be 21/2 per cent for the half year. While President Harding's annual message to Congress was well received, it could not be discovered that it was a factor in the stock trading during the latter half of the afternoon

COAL OUTPUT OF FRANCE COAL OUTPUT OF FRANCE
PARIS, Dec. 9—The French production of coal was 2,824,000 tons in October, compared with 2,719,000 in September.
Imports were 1,700,000 tons and exports 400,000 tons, according to an investigation by the Reparations Commission, which is discussing the question of German coal deliveries under the Peace Treaty. France now uses 67 per cent of the pre-war consumption, Great Britain
75 per cent, and Germany 84 per cent,
If imports be added of present German territory, compared with the same territory before the war, consumption is 108 per cent. New York Market Price Range for Week Ended Saturday, December 9, 1922

"Points of View" gives an additional insight into the qualities of a remarkable personality. In these two volumes Viscount Birkenhead deals, and deals characteristically, with subjects as distinctive and dissimilar as "Law Reform," "The Battle of Le Cateau," and "The Reconstruction of Civilization," the latter being a reprinted speech. From polemic to personal appreciations, from abstruse legal problems to controversial social questions, he turns nimbly, but never with any diminution of authority. Of study and learning there is much evidence, but the learning is carried with a deft vincing indication of his vitality and and learning there is much evidence, but the learning is carried with a deft lightness that makes every essay interesting to the least legal mind, provided, of course, that it is capable of some degree of serious attention. Lawyers do not generally write absorbingly, but "F. E."—as he will always be known—is as little the heavy, dogmatizing pedant in this work as in his former official duties.

Worth-While Children's Books

Two Little Misogynists. By Carl L. Spitteler. New York: Henry Holt & Co. $3.25.

Books written for children require, it is generally supposed, an especial technique. A sort of level has to be reached by either one of two methods. The first consists in talking down to a young audience, thereby patronizing them (this is quickly discerned), or by as-suming that they are by innocence so set apart that an effort must be made to reach them on a lofty height, with a rarified atmospheric effect.

Mr. Spitteler follows neither of these He writes naturally, easily and with no air of condescension or up lift. Gerould, Gesima, and Hansli are real people. It matters not that their ages aggregate barely 29 years. The author says it was "written for the young exclusively," but all "children in heart" will take to it as they do to "Alice in Wonderland." The grave humor is delightful, and the nonsense, while absolute and amoring it besed while absolute and amazing, is based upon familiar facts and things, a quality essential to any fantastic writing for a child. The music of Debussy did not victoriously stand the test of the concert. It had seemed crushed by the poem and the spectacle. But without them ft appears fragmentary, disconnected, hasty and even empty in some passages. Debussy intended to revise the score, to complete it, to give it more unity. Such as it is, it gives one the impression of a series of pages of sketches. One guesses what it could have been. Debussy seems to have been bridled, cramped, ham-pered by the drama. And once the drama is suppressed, the musical fragments lack the dramatic connection. They are like small pieces of something which aimed at grandeur. The ideas of Debussy, fine, rapid, impressionistic, did not lend themselves to this aggrandizement.

Another fact to be noted in the musical world is the revival of the concerts of the Société Philharmo-nique de Paris under the direction of Lucien Wurmser. M. Wurmser is an intrepid musician who certainly deserves success. It was a comforting spectacle to see the immense nave of the Gaumont Palace filled to the dome with thousands of persons who had come to hear good music. This the grands-concerts. The Place Cli-chy district is not the district to which flock the habitués of those concerts. But this audience of a different character does not listen with less attention and less faith. The rather long "Psyché" of César Franck was listened to with appreciation by this huge crowd, most of which was standing. The three melodies of Louis Aubert—"Séré-nade," "Ame Errante," "Hélène"—were equally appreciated. They were ex-cellently sung by Mme. Louise Matha, elocution, easily filled the enormous

And this achievement holds yet another promise to the artist, and that is a definite and important place in the British water-color school. His work is typically liberalism.

It is also very English in another sense. Being mostly of English subjects, Mr. Ethelbert White has preserved in it the national characteristics which are too often lost by the modern men in their devotion to Cézanne and his school. The photograph reproduced herewith is from one of the drawings made in Paris, showing that architecture as well as trees and fields, hills and dales, is understood by Mr. Ethelbert White. It is in landscape painting that Mr. Warshawsky shines. He manages his color with unusual freshness and brilliance of effect and puts the smiling face of France, be it Normandy, Brittany, or the Midi, before one with tremendous appeal. The clustering villages, their red-tiled roofs in fine foll to the surrounding greenery of tree and hill, the grivers and arching and hill, the rivers and arching bridges, châteaux and cathedrals sur-mounting the landscape, the feathery charm of the olive trees or the almond when spring has brought forth its hidden beauty, these are the happy moments that France has given this painter for his inspiration. Mr. Ipsen first studied in the Boston Museum School, then in the Royal Academy in Copenhagen whence his father, a Dane, sent him when he determined to make art his profession. He is well trained and he has a gift which is more than ordinary and which reflects to no small degree racial characteristics. His technique is extremely varied; some-times he loads his canvas with paint almost in the manner of Mancini and again he will use a very thin wash painting with extreme reticence. But in all his portraiture there is certain distinction and individuality. women he portrays have charm, the men character—one may like them or not but they are personalities not

News of Freemasonry

By DUDLEY WRIGHT

Special from Monitor Bureau London, Nov. 17 THERE is one feature or development in modern Masonry which is scarcely ever noted and which certainly has not received the attention which it deserves, that is, the attitude of Nonconformity toward the craft of Freemasonry. Two decades ago it was a rare exception to find either minister or layman in the ranks of Nonconformity who was, at the same time, prominent as a Freebe whispered that one or two brethren who were then becoming known as having the interests of the craft at land, it may be said, has all through its history been stalwart in its support. But in the days of the formaand the other a Huguenot, dissenters from the established church have, in general, stood aloof from the craft, with a few isolated exceptions, which go to prove the rule.

Now, all that is changed, and among the "class" lodges which have been founded of recent years are not a few where the constituent element is Nonconformity. A still further development, and a pleasing one, is the alacrity with which these lodges have utilized the craft in holding Masonic One such has just church services. the old pulpit in which John Wesley preached at the opening service. The first Prince of Wales to become Grand Patron of Scottish Freemasonry was George, afterward George IV, who retained the honor throughout his life and it was afterward assumed by his successor William IV. The elevation of the Labor Party from the subordinate position it occupied in relation to Mr. Lloyd George's Government to that of the predominant partner in the Opposition, to of the increase of its strength in the House, brings it more directly under the influence of this education than ever before. The House of Commons has often dampened the enthusiasm dangerous theorists and turned them into practical politicians. There is no reason to suppose that it has lost this power now. Mr. Bonar Law's Government will be a success, if it develops this attribute. The Labor Party of today may be a dangerous political element, but there is no rea-son why it should remain so always. A breathing time for the national forces of stability has been secured by the return of the Conservatives to power. They have only to pursue a policy of moderation to be able to look forward to several years of office at the end of which time the country may be in a better position than it now is to meet what the future may have

do not amount to five. When in 1792 Mary Wollstonecraft published her "Vindication of the Rights of Woman," Horace Walpole, with more prejudice than politeness, called her a "hyena in petticoats" and "a philosophizing serpent." Could Walpole have foreseen the Georgian age, with its women active in all the arts and learned professions, he might have abandoned the use of opprobrium as a bad and useless habit.

Women Composers Few

as painting in water color and music, but any real efficiency was promptly discouraged as "indelicate." Since she explained, talking to her press then myriads of schoolgirls have representative, Miss Gretchen Dick, and me the other morning at her learned something of the language of music without, for the most part, however, putting it to more real use than might an intelligent parrot under the same circumstances. Their ess modest brothers centuries earlier mastered the art of blowing their own rumpets, and, what is more, blowing their own tunes. Women composers are still surprisingly scarce—scarce enough, in fact, to deserve every encouragement. Perhaps men composers, on the other hand, merit all snubs they not infrequently get; for in England their ubiquity and industry are so formidable that even the most athletic critic cannot keep with their opus numbers.

When a representative of The Christian Science Monitor called to see Miss Rebecca Clarke, one of whose latest works, a trio for violin, cello, and piano, has just been twice performed in London, he found that she was not at all enthusiastic about being classified as a "woman"

"Art." she declared, "has nothing to do with the sex of the artist. I would sooner be regarded as a sixteenth-rate composer than be judged as if there were one kind of musical art for men and another for women.'

That is not true, however. I am British, and studied, as so many British composers have, with Sir Charles Villiers Stanford at the Royal College of Music in London. I have been influenced by many schools, of course; but in a certain sense one is influeverything one hears, don't k? Yes, the viola is my instrument and for several years I had to earn my living by playing. In fact my first opus since my student days was the sonata for viola and piano which tied with a work by Ernest Bloch for the Coolidge Prize. As you know, the casting vote was in favor of Bloch, whom I admire immensely. To be candid, I think it would have been most unfortunate had he been given second place."

Parenthetically it may be remarked that it was this incident which first brought Miss Clarke into prominence Including Harold Bauer, the jury sat behind screens and were ignorant of the composers whose works were played to them. One who was present has described the blank astonishment seen on the jurors' faces when they learned that of the two works chosen one was written by a woman. Clarke has twice won a second prize in this competition, and it is pleasant to learn that Mrs. Coolidge has commissioned her to write a sonata for cello and piano which will be played at the Pittsfield (Mass.) Festival in September, 1923.

Works in Prospect

Questioned about future works, Miss Clarke said she had just finished a setting of Masefield's "The Seal Man" for baritone and piano. She drew attention to the interesting fact that this is a prose work of Masefield's and not a poem.

"No," she remarked, "I have not the slightest desire to write an opera. Although I have never thought of writing one, I agree with those who believe that the ballet offers a much better medium for the modern composer.'

In view of the opinion expressed earlier in the conversation the inter viewer proceeded, a little tentatively, to ask Miss Clarke what she thought of her fellow women composers. She at once expressed appreciation of the work she had heard of Dame Ethel Smyth and singled out as "charming" string quartet by Germaine Taille ferre, a woman partner in the famous firm of the French "Six."

Speaking of the three S's, one learned that Miss Clarke has the greatest admiration for the genius of Stravinsky up to the period Sacre du Printemps." I found that she has proceeded further toward elaborateness and gorgeousness than anybody else I ever heard of.

Now that I have heard her tell the artist's side of the matter, I do not believe that I care a great deal. even if I had not heard her tell it, I might not be troubled so much by richly garbed heroines and heroines' rivals as I used to be. It was Mantegazza, I believe, who when speaking of mimicry as an expression of the fancies and activities of the soul, said that joy is centrifugal, while sorrow is centripetal. Thus the dance has become the most complete and perfect expression of joy. To

Yes, gentle reader.

The newspaper showed, under Biography, a quite prosaic announce-ment of a book about a learned gentleman. Now Percival Lowell himself, astronomer, scientist, member of a distinguished family, had never been more to me than a name to which I had paid formal respect: but shadowed forth in the background, shimmering through the cold print and finally obliterating it altogether, was he who had loved and wandered after Noto-Ah, that was different! Noto! He who discovered it and brought it to witch the heart of us said, "I liked its vowel color. I liked its consonant form, the liquid n and the decisive t." Well, so did I like it—so would anyone, with a right eye and ear. And then "An Unexplored Corner"—the mystery, and a corner—nothing so vast as to be overwhelming, but just subtly beckoning. And of Japan! I always thought the name Japan a spell in itself—lacquer and bronze; light bridges spanning clear waters; reflections; twisted trunk and pendant grace of wistaria; blur of plum blossoms; pine bough across a disc of the setting sun; black gorge and gleaming peak!

Ah, yes! muddy rubbers were forgotten for tripping sandals, and in Fancy's rainbowed rickshaw, I swung down the road taken by the lover of Noto and his Mountain-rice-field Lucky-younger-son of a Japanese guide, just at the beginning of the festival of the fifth moon. Was there ever such a time to go a-journeying? When the air was full of paper carp, floating in the breeze with such spontaneity they seemed to "turn the sky into an ocean, and Tokyo into a seabottom with a rockery of roof." seeker after Noto regretted having no companion on the journey, but I was glad, through and through, that there was no one to break the spell with his or her moods and views, to beckon this way, or to ban that way. Had there been that other "to divide the roubles and double the joys," then

BOSTON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1922

THE determination of President Harding, expressed in his message to Congress, to take vigorous steps for

A Truly Notable Message the more general enforcement of the Volstead Act, comes like a burst of sunshine on a dismal day. Coupled, as it happened to be in point of time, with the protest of the United States Government against the Turkish system of deportations, it put the national Administration squarely on the side of progressive moral—sentiment in the United States. That is an enviable position for any man, or group of men, desirous of maintaining or regaining political power. Historians may be challenged to produce a single instance in which a political cause which appealed to the moral sense of Americans has failed of ultimate triumph. Nor has the American electorate been in the habit of undoing the good things which have been accomplished by deliberate legislation. Revolutions do not go backward in the United States more than in other lands.

For that reason the group of persistent but benighted individuals in Congress who are striving to turn back the course of the Nation in destroying the plague of liquor, may well feel despair today. They have shad against them all along the overwhelming majority of the people. They thought, or pretended to think, that many influential officials were covertly friendly to them, but that illusion will be rudely dispelled by the President's message. The declaration of the Chief Executive of the Nation will be binding on subordinate officials, and the pronouncement of Mr. Harding as the head of the Republican Party will fix the policy of that party.

The Christian Science Monitor has frequently pointed out that constitutional prohibition, though it came into being under a Democratic Administration, had been in no sense a party issue, nor the creation of either party. Eminent leaders in each party have been dry or wet as their personal convictions or proclivities impelled them. As many Republican as Democratic states ratified the Eighteenth Amendment, and the states which failed to ratify are states normally classed as doubtful. The national platforms of the two great parties leave little to choose between their utterances on the question of prohibition.

But it is quite evident that whatever may have been the position of the parties in the past, it is entirely within the power of their leaders to so maneuver as to create a sharp division on this issue in the future. The Monitor does not ascribe to the President any purpose other than to urge upon the Nation the necessary steps for making the enforcement of the law effective. But his action is clearly in accord with the maxim that he serves his party best who serves his country best. For just at the moment when the most powerful forces in the Democratic Party are manifesting a purpose of surrendering to the liquor power and making terms with the violators of the law. the President, the official leader of the Republican Party, by his ringing official pronouncement, allies himself and his party on the side of law enforcement and the protection of American youth against the saloon. When the adherents of the liquor power are pointing proudly to their success in electing a wet Governor and a wet Senator in New York on the Democratic ticket, and a wet Senator and potential presidential nominee in New Jersey, the President accepts the challenge and appeals to the Nation to support him and his party on the dry issue.

If the Democrats are sufficiently misled to accept this challenge, and base their appeal to the country in 1924 on their willingness to surrender to the liquor interests they will be given an opportunity to judge of the political power of the moral sentiment of the Nation.

As a concrete proposition for correcting the conditions relating to the enforcement of the prohibition law—which he properly says "savor of world-wide scandal"—the President purposes calling a conference of governors of the states. Out of such a conference, he says, "it is confidently expected will emerge a more adequate comprehension of the whole problem, and definite policies of national and state co-operation in enforcing the laws." He stands ready to urge a course of enforcement that shall challenge "the destructive force engaged in wide-spread violation, official corruption, and individual demoralization."

Most citizens will turn first to the President's words concerning prohibition, that being for the moment the public question most engaging attention. But it would be doing injustice to what is a really remarkable President's message if reference were not made to certain other recommendations. The appeal for a constitutional amendment which will give to Congress the power to regulate child labor is one that will arouse widespread approval and support. The proposition for the fuller co-ordination of rail, water, and motor transportation, though it may seem obvious and commonplace, is nevertheless the first recognition by a President of the part the perfected highway and the high-powered motor have taken in disorganizing the business of railroads. The suggestion of a constitutional limitation upon the issuance of tax-free securities will arouse only the regret that some earlier executive did not carry it to enactment years ago. The comments upon the difficulties confronting the American farmer are convincing, even though the recommendations for their correction may not go far enough to satisfy the "farm bloc" in Congress. But, after all, it is to be remembered that nearly all of the President's suggestions for legislation must be regarded as merely academic so far as the present Congress is concerned. With less than three months of life, and cumbered up. with the subsidy bill, as well as appropriation measures. the present legislative body will probably not act on a single one of these recommendations.

Perhaps the least satisfactory, because the least frank, definite, and concrete, expressions in the message are those relative to the attitude of the United States in its foreign relations. This subject the President sums up in this closing paragraph:

After all, there is less difference about the part this great Republic shall play in furthering peace and advancing humanity than in the manner of playing it. We ask no one to assume responsibility for us; we assume no responsibility which others must bear for themselves, unless nationality is hopelessly swallowed up in internationalism.

All that is made clear by this exceedingly restrained and cautious, not to say cryptic, utterance is that the American people must wait yet awhile to learn definitely what the foreign policy of their Government is to be. Perhaps today there are many who would prefer to take it from what the Administration told its representative at Lausannews say to the Turks, than from the more vague explications in the President's message.

But in the main that message is one of the most notable to come from the White House in time of peace.

THE entire future of the National League of Women Voters is at issue in the proposal for the elimination of the welfare committees which is now under consideration by a commission appointed by the league. On its face the plan appears to argue for efficiency through concentration of the energies of the 2,500,000 women in the organization upon a few improvements in governmental action, rather than scattering efforts upon half a dozen differ-in the organization upon a few improvements in governmental action, rather than scattering efforts upon half a dozen different phases of social reform. But there is an underlying question of far greater significance to the future of this great body of women citizens. In its inception the league took a stand for political purification, for training for citizenship, and for efficiency in government. When it was organized there were already a number of national women's organizations interested in social reforms. In great body of women citizens. In its inception the league took a stand for political purification, for training for citizenship, and for efficiency in government. When it was organized there were already a number of national women's organizations interested in social reforms. Indeed, the league encountered difficulties during the first few months of its existence due to the fact that these other organizations scented overlapping and interference with their special interests. This was met by the organization of the Joint Congressional Committee, which has brought together more than a dozen national women's organizations, including the League of Women Voters and representing 10,000,000 women. The committee acts as a clearing house for legislation in which these various groups are interested, and its activities at Washington have on more than one occasion been pointed to as constituting a forceful lobby.

Now the question arises, Which will the league put first? Will it stand for training in citizenship and efficiency in government, which have from the first been its predominant aim? Or will it continue to support legislation of various social types? The organization which is asking legislation of Congress or of the state law-making bodies is in a difficult position. Its representatives are loath to point to political mistakes of parties or of party leaders. For in order to secure its legislation, it must please both parties and party leaders. There comes a time when, consciously or unconsciously, it must put first its belief in government reforms or its belief in bills.

There are some leaders in the National League of Women Voters who declare that the organization has now reached this point. These women state that other organizations can safely be intrusted with pushing forward social legislation, but that these other organizations are not so ready to stand for the political reforms which the league was organized to promulgate. To many of those who have watched the growth of the league with faith in its aims and hope in its accomplishments there is no doubt of the issue. It is a clear-cut choice which must be made. Legislation or government—with farreaching results depending upon the decision.

It is only at times of congestion or shortage, when the normal flow of the commodities necessary to the comfort and convenience of the public is checked, that the opportunity for profiteering presents itself. In time of war, as was so recently shown, this opportunity is greatest. Too many who had the chance became profiteers in those days, and new ways were devised, new tricks thought out, which made the predecessors of the ambitious profit-takers appear as novices in their chosen art. Just now, in the United States, the manipulator of coal supplies, be he shipper, distributor or peddler, is making the most of his chance to prey upon his neighbors. In nearly every city efforts are being made to curb him in his desire to take excessive profits because of the necessities of the poor and through the connivance, in some instances, of those who play into his hands.

Profiteering in Necessities

It is openly charged in Boston, for instance, that jobbers in and distributors of coal have continued to hold back fuel which should have been delivered in fulfillment of orders long on their books, and have sold this to "wagon dealers," who have retailed it in small lots, at a greatly increased price. This is but another evidence of the selfish and greedy tendency, manifested whenever the opportunity is given, to take an unfair, if not an unlawful profit. It is inexcusable when this is made possible through the monopolization, by connivance, of the available stocks of food, clothing, fuel or other necessaries, but it is reprehensible when cunningly resorted to by those who by the merest chance have become the beneficiaries of petty profiteering processes.

At the moment, despite the efforts of the people and their representatives, what might approach a nearly normal flow of coal and its substitutes into the bins and cellars of consumers, is checked, no longer at its source, but almost at its destination, by conscienceless profiteers. The temptation to profit unfairly at the expense of the public seems to outweigh the value the dealers should place upon an established patronage.

IN THE city of New York there is being discussed the possibility of limiting, by legislative enactment or by ordinance, the number of

by ordinance, the number of pleasure cars and taxicabs which shall be permitted to operate in the streets. The problem caused by increasing congestion due to the larger number of motor vehicles used each year is one which every large city in the United States is facing. It is not improbable, if this annual increase continues, that traffic in the business sections of the cities will be so hindered as to bring it practically to a standstill. There is no longer any discussion as to whether or not something should be done. The effort now is to determine what must be done.

The chief contributing cause of the congestion in the business districts, undoubtedly, is the use, probably too general, of automobiles conveying individuals to and from their offices and stores, and shoppers on more or less necessary errands. As to the convenience and desirability of this means of traveling about the city there is no question, but its indulgence is the chief cause of the conditions that must be corrected. In Boston, as well as in most other cities, the streets are not laid out to accommodate the traffic that now demands an outlet. The widening of these thoroughfares is an undertaking which is too expensive to be considered.

The problem is no longer that of the pedestrian alone. Indeed, it is not improbable that his lot has been made somewhat less precarious because of the enforced slowing down of motor traffic in the centers of the cities. Unless a way is found to double-deck the streets, either by providing subways or elevated roadways, the only method of relief remaining would seem to be to place a definite limit upon the class of traffic which would be permitted to use the streets within certain prescribed areas. To fix those limitations without unnecessary hardship would be no easy task, and it will be only by courageous and impartial legislation, and by an unselfish co-operation on the part of the public generally, that the desired relief can be realized. The emergency exists now. It will become more acute unless a solution is found.

EASILY within the recollection of many people active in business and industrial affairs in the United States today, an important change has been wrought in the system of trade apprenticeships and the methods of technical training in the important producing occupations. The change, judging from conditions in many of the trades, and in the industries generally, has not been for the best. The determination on the part of those who monopolize the building trades, for instance, appears to be to limit the number of apprentices to a point that will insure a continued scarcity of skilled workers and a consequent high wage schedule for the few who must be depended upon to do the work of many. If the inclination might be to admit the reasonableness of a policy which makes it possible for those engaged in an occupation to limit the number of those who might desire to enlist in the same activity, one would be compelled to concede that the effect on the public is not a desirable one. Building costs have been doubled and trebled in the larger cities of the United States, not by a scarcity of available labor, but by a scarcity of those who are able to qualify under the union labor rules which are enforced in the building trades. The benefit has been to a few at the expense of the many.

Skilled labor is entitled to a fair premium upon its services, but it is not entitled to this premium plus the bonus which it compels the public to pay because of the monopoly which Labor has created. Suppose in agriculture, which certainly may now be regarded as a highly skilled industry, it should be agreed among farmers who have been taught the approved theories of their occupation that none but those similarly trained should be permitted to engage in farming for hire. Suppose also that the railroad brotherhoods should adopt hard and fast rules limiting apprenticeships in their employment, avowedly for the purpose of bringing about a dearth of skilled workers and higher wage schedules for the elect.

It is contended, of course, that the wage-earners have fhemselves contributed to the shortage of highly skilled workers. In many important industries the whole tendency is toward specialization. In the manufacture of shoes, for instance, it is no longer necessary to "learn the trade," as that term is generally understood. Few of the younger generation engaged in the factories could go to a bench and "build" a pair of shoes. In the machine shops, foundries, and assembly plants there would be found few who could follow the process employed from point to point until the completed product was ready for delivery. The tendency is away from that thoroughness which formerly was attained only through the service of a long apprenticeship. The result is increased production, whether or not it has been to "keep the quality up."

But the demand now is for the skilled mechanic This demand will become more and more insistent as the ranks of those who, from choice or necessity, have served their apprenticeship, are depleted. How is the need, imperative in a sense, to be met? If those who dictate the policies of the trade unions persist in closing their vocations to the recruits, the trades must be taught, logically. in special schools supported by the public or endowed privately. Many such schools now exist, and their number must be increased if the essential trades are to be filled. It is not important, at the moment, to determine what the status of these recruits will be, whether or not they will be recognized by the labor unions, or whether they must form an independent unit in opposition to the present monopolistic control. The important fact is that these trained artisans are needed in the essential industries, but perhaps nowhere more than in the building trades. It must be seen to that, when ready, places are made for them, despite the effort that will be made to make their employment distasteful and unprofitable.

Editorial Notes

TRULY invigorating it is to see someone, the weight of whose opinion cannot be ignored, openly declaring in the press that American passenger business on the seven seas is not in danger because the passengers are denied alcoholic beverages. Such is the opinion which is voiced in no unmistakable terms by Capt. Ryland Drennan, veteran in command of the Pacific Mail steamship President Lincoln, in a San Francisco periodical. Captain Drennan is quoted in part thus:

These wonderful ships of ours need no alibis because liquor has been eliminated. . . If there exists a person who is hesitating in choosing between a dry or wet ship before purchasing transportation, let him discuss the matter, as I have done frequently, with those who cross the Pacific at least once each year. . . These men and travelers, the old dependables, now prefer our American ships. . . America has the right kind of ships, the right kind of men to handle them, and all that is needed to visualize the exact conditions to the public, and we will build and maintain the greatest merchant marine in history.

Really, Americans need to be proud of the fact that their vessels are dry, not to bemoan that they are not wet. There is no doubt whatever that when it is thoroughly realized that no liquor can be obtained on American vessels, this will serve as a most effective advertisement to draw custom, and one more step will have been taken toward the final exposure of the great fallacy of liquor.

IT REALLY is no wonder that quite a strong plea should have been voiced, at a recent meeting of the Rowland Hill Memorial and Benevolent Fund at the Mansion House, London, for an early return of the penny postage in England. The fact was recalled that the new Postmaster-General had stated that he considered a return to penny postage would be a most desirable reform. Moreover, Sir G. Evelyn P. Murray, secretary to the Post Office, declared at the meeting that, consistently with. making the Post Office pay its own way, the plan at present was to bring back the old-time rate as soon as possible. That the present rate acts as a deterrent to some mail is unquestionable, and there seems little doubt that any possible loss of revenue arising from a lowering of the charge would be more than offset, now that the immediate stress of the war has passed, by restoring that sense of satisfaction which would inevitably be associated with such a step.

Its scathing exposure of the intrigues and activities in South Africa of the Communist Party, which has been linked up with the Third International, constitutes by no means the least important part of the report of the Mar-tial Law Commission recently issued in Pretoria. In this report considerable attention is given to the writings and sayings of the South African representative of the Third International, a D. Ivor Jones, who is declared to have stated, in a memorandum, that the South African natives "are ripe for the message of the Communist International." It may be recalled that a temporary coalition between the Nationalist and the Labor parties in South Africa has already been discussed, a meeting having actually been held in Johannesburg to inaugurate the United Labor Front movement. Little straws perhaps, but important indications of one of the far-reaching movements operating in the world today.

A DELIGHTFUL bit of hitherto unpublished verse by Robert Louis Stevenson has just come into the possession of the Stevenson Society of New York. It is a "thank you" poem of a couple of stanzas which was penned some thirty-four years ago on his yacht Casko, in acknowledgment of the kindness of his friend, François Donat, the Governor of the coral island of Fakarava, in the Low Archipelago, and was brought to America by three natives of Papeeti, Tahiti. The poem reads:

Threefold, my Donat, threefold dear thy gifts; Dear, firstly, being welcome in themselves, Next, for remembrance of enchanted isles, And, last and most, my Donat, being thine.

Blank verse, I know, in Gallic ears, A mighty senseless sound appears. Ah, Donat, I lack space and time To put thy kindness into rhyme.

A trifle, it is true, but fulfilling Robert Browning's stand-

As A result of a prize contest recently conducted by the New York State College of Forestry at Syracuse University, ten of the most famous historical trees of the State have been identified. These include the so-called "Scythe tree" at Waterloo; a black walnut tree at Amsterdam which was planted by Sir William Johnson almost 175 years ago; the Witenagemot tree, planted by a board of Indian commissioners near the confluence of the Tomhannock and the Hoosick rivers, and an elm under which Joseph Brant made the speech which has been called the masterpiece of Indian oratory. If more such contests were organized, possibly fewer historical facts, many of really very great interest, would be forgotten.

Only four wooden railway mail cars are now in use in America, it appears, the rest being either all steel, or constructed with an all-steel under-frame or of wood reinforced with steel. The disappearance of the all-wood car is due to a law passed in 1913 because of the great number of fatalities among postal clerks in railroad wrecks, a number which last year was reduced to two. This is, of course, a very small percentage in consideration of the fact that there are over 20,000 railway mail clerks at work every day. So long as there are still four such cars in operation, however, an avoidable risk is being taken.

APPEARANCE of the name of Richard Strauss on a program rendered in the Concerts Colonne, in Paris, marked the restoration of one more of those almost imperceptible links between the nations severed by the war. Little by little, post-war amenities will accomplish their important work.
